appointing a Boundary Commission to go into the question of such disputed areas. I may assure this House—coming as I do from such an area and I have some experience about it—that at least four or five taluks in the Chittoor district are to be included in our State. Such being the case, I feel that the Government will have, once again, to come before the House with another amendment to change the names abutting the borders of our State. Would it not be advisable that the Government should wait patiently for some more time till the decisions of the Boundary Commission are known and thus the Government will save plenty of our time as well as the finances of our State and not waste the time of this House. After the verdict of the Boundary Commission, they can come forward with a final and consolidated amendment. I request the Hon. Minister to throw more light on the matter and enlighten me as to the urgency of an amendment of this kind. If there is no urgency in this matter, I request the Government to withdraw the amendment at this stage and wait for some more time.''

* THE HON. SRI M. BHAKTAVATSALAM :—'' Sir, I am sorry the hon. Member is entirely mistaken in thinking that this amendment has anything to do with the border disputes in Chittoor or other districts. Perhaps, the previous amendment which was carried in the House, a short while ago, had something to do with such questions. (Laughter.) Here, the position is, there are two separate areas, the Cambodia area and the Tirunelveli area. They are separated by border lines. They are now separated by Kothagudi and the Vaigai river. Now, complaints have been received from time to time about the illegal and unauthorized transport of cotton from the Cambodia area to the Tirunelveli area, as there are no police outposts or stations to effectively check the illegal transport of cotton from one area to another. Therefore, this boundary line is changed and certain other areas are included. I have consulted the hon. Member, Mr. Ramaswami Naidu, who hails from that area. He has absolutely no objection to this amendment and, therefore, I have no doubt that the hon. Member from Chingleput could very safely accept this amendment.''

The resolution was put and carried.
